Course Goals
The goal of this course is to foster fundamental teaching skills in young piano teachers through study of various teaching techniques and critical thinking on current issues in piano education. The course will encourage the development of a personal and creative approach to teaching. Throughout the course, students will face questions like: Why do I want to teach? Would I enjoy working with children or adults? What personality traits are required for effective teaching? Students will draw conclusions in the final paper “My Teaching Philosophy”.

Course Description
1. Students will survey piano method books, supplemental & theory/technique books, and learn the aspects of independent teaching including business procedures, and piano studio policies.

2. The class will have field trips to the Twin Cities, visiting two of the most successful independent piano studios in Minnesota. Students will observe effective piano teaching, write observation reports, and participate in discussions with peers about their reports.

3. Students will have peer review sessions of their own video-taped teaching. This exercise will include a self evaluation report made by studying the video-taped lesson.

4. Students will give an oral presentation on a topic of their choice from current issues in piano education. The purpose of this presentation is to develop critical thinking on educational issues and to open up valuable discussion with student peers.
